

I am very concerned with companies like Clear Channel controlling most of the radio or TV stations in a city. In my local market they already are the largest single owner at 25% of the San Diego market. They ALSO own a large number of billboards around our county. Clear Channel is looking more and more like the new Evil Empire, "join us or die." This is not what America is about. Our basic freedoms are not enhanced by a single company controlling more and more aspects of a local media market. Remember, the airwaves are owned by the citizens of the USA, and the FCC is responsible to protect these assets. The FCC is currently acting more like the lap dog of big media, instead of fulfilling it's mandate to be a watchdog for the American people.
